BIOGRAPHY

Dr David Allison practices entirely in the field of hand and wrist surgery. He ceased operative surgery in June 2012 and now consults and does medico-legal work.

In the practice field Dr Allison has an interest in congenital hand and upper limb anomalies and brachial plexus birth injuries.

In the adult sphere, he has a particular interest in the painful and unstable wrist; salvage procedures of the wrist, especially partial wrist fusions; and, the management of the comminuted fracture of the distal radius. He continues to develop his interest in the anatomy and afflictions of the proximal interphalangeal joints.
