BIOGRAPHY

Dr. Raymond Wallace is an experienced orthopaedic surgeon with a focus on knee surgery. He completed his MBBS with Honours Class 2 at the University of New South Wales and graduated in 1983. He obtained his FRACS from the Royal College of Surgeons and FAOrthA from the Australian Orthopaedic Association in 1991. Dr. Wallace underwent general surgical training at St Vincent's Hospital, Royal North Shore Hospital, and Mona Vale Hospital from 1983 to 1987. He then pursued specialist orthopaedic surgical training at Sydney Hospital, Westmead Hospital, and Royal Prince Alfred Hospital from 1987 to 1990. Since 1990, Dr. Wallace has been in private practice, specializing in knee surgery and providing medico-legal consultation. He has also engaged in continuous professional development through post-graduate courses, including training in assessment under MAA and WorkCover guidelines and the AMA Guides. Dr. Wallace is dedicated to delivering high-quality orthopaedic care and staying updated with the latest advancements in his field.
